Interested in being a peer tutor or writing advisor in the CWLT?

Highly successful students from all majors are encouraged to apply to become paid writing advisors and tutors at the CWLT. Applicants are selected through a competitive process in the spring, and training is held at the beginning of fall semester.

For more information on student employment applications, visit www.pugetsound.edu/cwlt.

Submit a paper to the Writing Excellence Competition!

Prizes are awarded each spring to the best papers in the humanities, social sciences, natural sciences and mathematics, first-year seminars, connections, and graduate programs. Submissions are due at the beginning of the spring semester.

For more information about the Writing Excellence Competition, visit www.pugetsound.edu/cwlt.
The Center for Writing, Learning, and Teaching (CWLT) offers numerous academic support services for Puget Sound students and faculty members.

RESOURCES

Writing Advisors who are selected through a rigorous application process and who are specially trained to help students get started on a paper, organize their thoughts, or improve their editing skills.

Peer Tutors in a wide range of subjects who are nominated by professors in their disciplines and who are specially trained to help students individually or in small groups.

Accommodations for students with disabilities.

Classes that help students improve their reading efficiency.

Workshops on writing personal statements for graduate and professional school applications.

Resources for writers, including books and handouts on writing, as well as the style manuals for APA, MLA, and Chicago.

Computers for students to use when writing papers and online assignments, as well as when using adaptive equipment.

Teaching and learning resources for faculty members, including books and journals, “Wednesday at 4” conversations, in-class workshops, and individual consultation with CWLT faculty.

Events such as the Long Night Against Procrastination and Writing Marathon.

WRITING
writing@pugetsound.edu

The Writing Center is the branch of the CWLT dedicated to helping students improve their academic writing. We’re ready to offer a thoughtful response to papers or drafts written for any discipline at any stage of the composing process. Although we don’t proofread, we can help students improve their proofreading skills.

LEARNING
learning@pugetsound.edu

The Learning Center offers students opportunities to improve their academic performance and become independent and effective learners. Our services include expert, friendly, free, one-to-one and group tutoring in accounting/finance, biology, chemistry, economics, exercise science, foreign languages, math, physics, and statistics.

DISABILITY SERVICES
disabilityservices@pugetsound.edu

Support services for students with diagnosed disabilities are arranged through the CWLT. Assistance is available to develop compensatory strategies and to arrange appropriate accommodations.