Welcome to the third issue of the Logger SummerTime(s). We hope these attempts to keep in touch with you have been helpful.

In seven weeks you will be back on campus, ready to start classes. When I think about all of us back on campus, the word courage comes to mind. Here is what I believe about courage, it's from Brene Brown. "Courage is showing up when you can't control the outcome."

There is so much happening. As Chaplain Dave Wright wrote about in the last newsletter "It’s a hard time, but with the rise of strong voices and deep activism, it’s a time of potential." And that potential takes courage, showing up to do the work and to put ourselves out there. Using our voices in the work of being anti-racist and confronting issues of systemic racism and privilege takes courage. Take part in our Instagram Challenge and show how you are showing up!
We don't know the outcome of COVID-19 in terms of how it will continue to affect our lives. We hope to make changes in our work around systemic racism. Nothing we do in either of these arenas is guaranteed and we have to show up and do the work. We have to have courage.

And in that we need to be kind to one another too. We are going to make mistakes. We don't always know what to do. We have to show up and do the work with kindness toward one another. I look forward to seeing you and doing the work.

Marta Cady, Associate Dean of Students for Student Support
Download our coloring page of the Fieldhouse and a special guest too!

University of Puget Sound