

Hey there!

As you probably know by now, I'm your Peer Advisor for this 2018-2019 academic year! My name is Brynn, and in case you forgot what I look like, here's an actual, candid pic of me reacting to a molecule.

You may be wondering, who's this person trying to give me academic guidance? What's her deal? Well, here's some info about me: I'm a senior majoring in biochemistry and minoring in math and I'm from Long Beach, California. I am/have been involved in the pre-health/pre-med, Honors, and Dual-Degree programs, so if you're curious about any of those, please come chat with me!

Outside of my role as a Peer Advisor, I also work at the Center for Writing, Learning, & and Teaching (aka the CWLT) as a chemistry tutor – which is super cool resource that I would highly recommend even if you don't come for help from me. I love rock climbing, hiking, walking around Tacoma in search of friendly cats despite my cat allergy, and volunteering at the local women's prison through a super cool program called Freedom Education Project Puget Sound (or FEPPS for short).

Okay that's enough about me for now, but if you want to know more or share some details about yourself, please reach out! A non-exhaustive list of things I can help you with are:

- Planning out your degree
- Talking to professors
- Time management & study techniques
- Pointing out other resources
- Helping you achieve whatever your definition of success is

In addition to academic concerns, I am also happy to answer any questions you may have about life on campus or cool places to explore in the surrounding area. In short, I want to help you make the most of your time here. Please say hi if you see me around campus! It might take me a while to learn everyone's face, so I promise I'm not ignoring you if I don't say hi first.

Best wishes,
Brynn
