

LOGGER LIBS

Inspired by the irresistible hilarity that comes with playing with parts of speech (we're totally riffing on MAD LIBS®), we've created a few Logger Libs for you to enjoy with all your Logger friends!

TO PLAY: Each story has blank spaces where the words are missing. Your job is to fill in those blanks or recruit a friend (or friends) to fill them in for you. The trick is to plug in the words before anyone reads the story.

Want to play by yourself? Fill in the WORD LIST on the back of this page before you read the story. Then, using the words from the list, complete your very own Logger Lib!

EXAMPLE:

Whether you're in the [noun] of 2021, or you graduated [number] years ago, there's one thing all Loggers can agree on: Once a [noun], always a [same noun]!

Whether you're in the [iced coffee] of 2021, or you graduated [86] years ago, there's one thing all Loggers can agree on: Once a [BMX bike], always a [BMX bike]!

Puget Sound Hatchet Facts

The Puget Sound hatchet was first _____ in 1908 by a group of _____ who thought it was the perfect symbol for a school whose sports teams were the _____. Soon the practice of "the Hatchet" became a tradition. Each spring the senior class, which had guarded the _____ all year, handed it over to the juniors in a special ceremony. Eventually the hatchet became an object of intrigue and _____. Students etched their _____ into its head and handle, and classes plotted to _____ it from one another. The hatchet would disappear for months, even _____, only to resurface at a public event, such as (a/an) _____. In 2008—the 100th anniversary of its discovery—the hatchet returned to campus once more and _____ its rightful place as a/an _____ of Puget Sound.

LOGGER LIBS

Puget Sound Hatchet Facts

WORD LIST

- Verb – past tense _____
- Plural noun _____
- Job title – plural _____
- Verb ending in -ing _____
- Noun _____
- Noun _____
- Plural noun _____
- Verb _____
- Period of time – plural _____
- Special event _____
- Verb – past tense _____
- Noun _____