Rules for the Contest

Papers written as part of the requirement for courses taken at the University of Puget Sound during Spring, Summer, or Fall 2022 are eligible. Papers of any length may be submitted; short papers are as likely to win as long ones. Papers in any category written in languages other than English are welcome and encouraged.

Students may submit no more than one paper in each category. The same paper may be submitted to two categories only if one of the categories is the Race and Pedagogy category. Students should submit two versions of the paper: the original paper with the professor's comments and a clean copy with no comments.

Papers submitted may be single-authored or co-authored. Students who submit co-authored papers must obtain written permission from all their co-authors. If you are submitting a co-authored paper, you will need to submit a permission form. If your co-author is not on campus, please attach an email signifying consent from your co-author. In the event that a co-authored paper wins an award, all co-authors will share the credit, and the prize money will be divided equally among them.
